The movement of ocean waters as the tides rise and fall is what produces tidal energy. One sustainable energy option is tidal power.

Engineers in the 20th century found ways to harness the power of the tides in places with a large tidal range, or areas that change from high tide to low tide. To harness the power of the tides, each technique employs specialized generators.

The development of tidal energy sources is a relatively new field. There hasn't been much power generated thus far. There is a severe lack of commercial-scale tidal power plants globally. La Rance, France was the site of the first. The tallest building is the South Korean Sihwa Lake Tidal Power Station. There are very few locations in the US where tidal energy could be economically produced, and none of the country's tidal plants are operational. This energy source has considerably more potential for usage in Russia, China, France, and England than in any other country.

Concerns regarding the ownership of underwater land and its potential environmental impact have prompted legal proceedings in the US. Since there is no solid assurance that tidal energy will generate profits or benefit consumers, investors are not very excited about it. To make tidal energy generators more profitable for energy companies while simultaneously reducing their environmental effect, engineers are constantly innovating new ways to harness the power of the tides.

Question 29: Which could be the best title for the passage?

- A. How to have tidal energy?
- B. Where could tidal energy be produced?
- C. Tidal energy in The US
- D. Tidal Energy

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct option that best fits each of the numbered blanks from 34 to 40

People who support the laws and reporters who write about the issue don't always ask what will be used instead of plastic bags and how that will affect the environment. Folks still need bags to carry their shopping home. And paper bags, which are the most common alternative, might be just as bad or even worse for the environment, depending on what you care about the most.

That's making the movement against bags split. Some bills, like the one in Massachusetts, try to cut down on both plastic and paper bags, but they still favor paper. Some places, like New York City, treat all single-use bags the same. But the question still stands as to whether single-use bags are always worse than reusable ones.

Different studies have come to very different conclusions about how bags affect the environment throughout their lives. Some, like the ironically named American Progressive Bag Alliance, get money from groups that work with the plastics industry. There are a lot of assumptions that go into studies, even ones that were done with the best of intentions. The cotton tote bag can be used instead of how many plastic bags? No need for another small plastic garbage bag if the same bag is used as the bag in the bathroom trash can. Does that reduce the amount of plastic that is used?

Things get even less clear if climate change is your main concern. An Australian state government agency published one of the most in-depth studies on the environmental effects of bags in 2007. It found that paper bags leave a bigger carbon footprint than plastic bags. The main reason for this is that making and transporting paper bags uses more energy.

"Because the paper breaks down, people think it's better for the environment, but it's not in terms of climate change," says David Tyler, a chemistry professor at the University of Oregon who has looked at the research on how bag use affects the environment. There are many reasons why paper has a bigger carbon footprint than plastic, but one of the main ones is that paper bags are thicker than plastic bags. Tyler says, "In a broad sense, carbon footprints are related to the mass of an object." For instance, more trucks are needed to deliver paper bags to a store than plastic bags because paper bags take up more space.

Question 34: Which is the most suitable title for the passage?

- A. Paper bags are a good substitute for plastic ones.
B. Is plastic really worse than paper?
C. Activities of American Progressive Bag Alliance
D. What people think about paper bags

Question 35: The word “their” in paragraph 1 refers to _____.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct option that best fits each of the numbered blanks from 29 to 33.

A food reviewer is a paid writer who writes about the food they try. People who do this job may also be known as food writers or restaurant reviewers. Food reviewers usually write about what they eat after going to different places and ordering different kinds of food. Some people write about food for websites, blogs, newspapers, and magazines. But not all jobs in this field pay well, or at all. Food writers who are just starting out might send in reviews for free at first just to get their name on the paper and show that they have written something. Some people become food reviewers by writing about the food they eat and where they eat on social media.

They can try new foods anywhere in the world. A few of these experts have their own TV shows. People who know a lot about food can also write books about it. There aren't many paid openings for this highly sought-after job. People who want this job will have to work hard and spend a lot of time on it.

Here are the levels of pay for each job:

●$36 an hour for a journalist

$41,869 a year for a reporter

Writing staff: $38,716 a year

Content writers make $17.54 an hour.

Pay ranges from $7.25 to $74.45 an hour.

Food writing is a pretty small area, so not much is known about how much food writers make. News reporters, staff writers, and content writers, whose jobs are a lot like food reviews, can find information here. A lot of people who review food don't always write about it. They look at places for a living and write about other things when they're not rating restaurants.

A baby born today will live for how long? 100 years? 120 years? Genes that could make us all live longer are being studied by scientists.

100 years old is already an important milestone for a huge number of people. They are called "welllderly" because there are so many healthy older people. Not having a big sickness like high blood pressure, heart disease, or diabetes makes this group of people over 80 years old.

In places where good old age is common, there are a lot of research studies. The island of Okinawa in Japan and Calabria in the south of Italy are two examples. About 2,000 people are living in the small village of Molochio in Calabria. Plus, at least eight of them are over 100 years old. “I eat a lot of fruit and vegetables” is the answer that experts always get from people like this when they are asked how they stay so healthy and young. "Something from every food group." "I don't drink or smoke."

Today, experts are also looking at genes to try to figure out why some people live so long. In the past, they only looked at things like food and lifestyle. Eric Topol, a researcher, says that we must have genes that keep us from getting old. People who share a DNA link were looked at in the new study on living a long time. Living in Ecuador is a cool group. There are several people in one part of the country who all have the same genetic situation. Laron disease is the name for it. Not very tall—just over a meter—these guys get. They are also less likely to get cancer and diabetes because they have Laron syndrome. Their family members live shorter lives because of this. Additionally, there is a group of long-living Japanese-American guys on the Hawaiian island of Oahu. In the Laron syndrome group, they share a gene.

The family trees of the 100-year-old people were made by researchers back in Calabria. Family records from the 1800s to the present day were looked at. To sum up, DNA factors that are good for men's health have been found. Most of the time, women in Europe live longer than men, so this finding is strange. Why do some people live longer? Probably a third factor—luck—comes into play along with genes and the surroundings.

B. More European men live to a healthy old age than women.
C. In the past, more people lived to a healthy old age.
D. We will all live to at least 100 years.

Các nhà nghiên cứu đã lập cây phả hệ của những người 100 tuổi ở Calabria. Hồ sơ gia đình từ những năm 1800 đến nay đã được nghiên cứu. Tóm lại, các yếu tố DNA có lợi cho sức khỏe của nam giới đã được tìm thấy. Hầu hết thời gian, phụ nữ ở châu Âu sống lâu hơn nam giới, vì vậy phát hiện này thật kỳ lạ. Tại sao một số người sống lâu hơn? Có lẽ một yếu tố thứ ba—may mắn—có tác động cùng với gen và môi trường xung quanh.

Usually, people knew how their kids would live. They have no idea what their lives will be like in a few years because things change so fast now. The next part is not science fiction. That's what experts think will happen. Do you think it's safe to be thinking behind the wheel? No way! No worries, you've set it to "autopilot," and your car's high-tech computers and cameras "know" how to get you home safely.

What will you eat for lunch? Stopping to get a burger or pizza used to be common. Using your diagnostic machine, you can now find out what things your body needs. The food-prep machine will make you a salad if your body needs more veggies and less fat.

Then you walk down the hall to your home office after lunch. This panel has everything you need to finish your work. You no longer have to go to the office because of your information screen and your brand-new computer. There is an important word from a coworker in Brazil that shows up on the information screen. You can reply to him right away and then get on with other things.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct option that best fits each of the numbered blanks from 34 to 40

Many people think that seeing certain birds is bad luck or even a sign that they are going to die soon. For instance, both crows and ravens are linked to war and death all over the world. In the past, people thought that crows and ravens were friends of the war gods or signs that the gods were on their way. This idea changed in the end. People thought that crows, in particular, could bring bad luck or even help people get to the future. No one should have seen a single crow or raven flying overhead, because that meant something bad was going to happen soon.

Interestingly, the raven is thought to bring good luck to the crown of England, even though it might be bad luck for individuals. It was so important that a "raven master" was still a real government job in London. He takes care of the ravens there and clips their wings so they can never fly too far from where the British government is based. This way, bad luck will never be able to take the kingdom.

The swallow is another bird that is thought to be able to tell people what will happen in their lives. If you see a swallow in the right way and at the right time, it could mean either good or bad luck. Christians first linked the swallow to the death of Jesus Christ, possibly because of its reddish-brown breast. So, people thought it meant death when they saw a swallow fly through their house. But over time, farmers started to think that swallows were lucky signs. If swallows live in a barn, that barn will be lucky next year. A farmer should also avoid killing a bird because that would ruin any good luck they were having.

A lot of people think these beliefs are just old wives' tales, but there is some evidence to back them up. Crows and ravens, for example, show up after fights because they are scavengers. So, seeing a lot of crows and ravens could mean that there is war in the area. Along with that, swallows eat bugs that can make cattle sick. In this way, a farmer with lots of swallows in his barn may have healthy animals. This means that the next time you want to laugh at an old wives' tale, you might want to check to see if it's true first.

Question 34: Which of the following could be the best title of the passage?

- A. The crows and their predictions B. The different beliefs in birds
C. Superstitions about birds D. Are birds bad lucks?

Question 35: The word "clip" in paragraph 2 is closet in meaning to _____.

Question 37: According to the passage, which of the following is TRUE about the ravens?

- A. They are driven away by people all over the world.
B. The ravens are taken care of and videoed in England.
C. The ravens are captured near the seats of the British government.
D. The British realm will be fallen to bad chance if there are no ravens nearby.

Question 38: As mentioned in the passage, the swallow originally was considered as .

- A. the death of Jesus Christ B. good luck for farmers
C. crop failure for the farmers D. good blessedness for the following year

Question 39: The word "healthy" in the last paragraph is opposite in meaning to _____.

- A. miraculous B. original C. adequate D. fragile

Question 40: Which of the following most accurately reflects the author's suggestion in the last paragraph?

- A. The old wives' tales are more often used for fun than the truth.
B. Although some superstitions are based on reality, people should not believe in them.
C. People should not make fun of the superstition.
D. Farmers should protect the swallows to prevent bad lucks.

There is no doubt that Monopoly is one of the most popular games in the entire world. There are a total of 26 different languages available, and it is sold in 80 different countries. On the other hand, where did this time-honored board game originate, and what led to its meteoric rise to prominence? Elizabeth Magie, a political activist, has been credited with being the first person to publish "The Landlord's Game," a game that is intended to teach people skills. To educate people about how wealthy and powerful people take advantage of those who are less fortunate to amass even more wealth, the game was designed to teach them. Sadly, the game did not perform well in the marketplace, and she only managed to sell a small number of copies.

It was redesigned by a man named Charles Darrow in 1934, and he created a game of chance during that time. In spite of this, the game maker Parker Brothers did not accept his creation, which he referred to as "Monopoly," when he showed it to them. In their opinion, it was very complicated and had an excessive number of defects. After much deliberation, Darrow made the decision to produce the game on his own. He crafted and sold more than five thousand sets of handmade items to a department shop in the area. The game was so well received by the general public that Darrow decided to return it to Parker Brothers, who had already purchased the rights to manufacture and distribute the game.

How often do you find yourself wishing there were more time in the day? Working hard, maintaining a clean home, reducing energy consumption to benefit the environment, and exercising regularly are all necessities in today's world. "Alex Gadsden" was always pressed for time, just like the rest of us. He needed to shed some pounds because he was juggling a home and a business. Because of this, he resolved to take action. The bicycle washer was his invention. A 45-minute bike ride now greets the 29-year-old every morning. He does the laundry, cuts down on energy costs, and feels better overall.

"The user gets a good workout," he stated. Even after just two weeks of use, I can tell it's making a difference. More often than not, I now rise at approximately 6:30 in the morning and immediately start the cycle washer. Having it in the garden allows me to enjoy being outdoors. After that, I'm energized. After that, I usually have breakfast and a shower, and then I feel prepared to start the day. The environmentally friendly washing machine uses 25 liters of water per wash and takes out enough laundry to fill a shopping bag. His typical cycle time is 25 minutes for washing and 20 minutes for drying clothes. Of course, it also doesn't require any power.

The owner of a cleaning service, Mr. Gadsden, is certain that his device will sell like hotcakes. He could very well be correct if his invention simultaneously cleans your clothes, keeps you fit, and lowers your electricity bill.

Question 29: What is the passage mainly about?

- A. Ways to do the washing properly
- B. Cycling makes you healthier
- C. A fascinating invention
- D. The importance of daily exercise

Question 30: The word "consumption" in paragraph 1 is closest in meaning to _____.

- A. utilization
- B. preservation
- C. humiliation
- D. reflection

Question 31: According to paragraph 1, what does Alex Gadsden achieve with the invention of the cycle washer?

- A. He puts on weight.
- B. He helps his wife with the washing-up.
- C. He becomes more involved in recycling.
- D. His electricity bills are reduced.

Question 32: The word "it" in paragraph 2 refers to _____.

- A. workout
- B. the cycle washer
- C. energy costs
- D. difference

Question 33: Which of the following is NOT true, according to the passage?

- A. Alex's machine isn't effective in terms of cleaning the clothes.
- B. It doesn't require any electricity to run the cycle washer.
- C. Alex Gadsden is positive about the success of the cycle washer.
- D. The cycle washer can help you to remain strong and healthy.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct option that best fits each of the numbered blanks from 34 to 40

Grandparents are becoming the generation that is being forgotten because today's youth are too busy to listen to the stories that their grandparents have to tell about the world in the past.

Just twenty-one percent of children between the ages of five and eighteen will go to see their older relatives to learn about how their lives were different in the past. This includes learning about where they worked, what it was like to live during the war, and how they initially met the person who would become the love of their life. More than fifty percent of young people are unaware of the occupations that their grandparents held before retirement. Regrettably, one in ten people has admitted that they are simply not interested in their grandmother's or grandfather's abilities and passions, and one-quarter of people only visit them to receive pocket money. On the other hand, twenty-three percent of people claim that the reason they do not know anything about their older relatives is because they do not really get the opportunity to talk about it enough.

Even though 65 percent of children do see their grandparents every week, 37 percent of them claim that the only reason they do so is because their parents specifically want them to. And even though 39 percent of children talk to their grandparents on the phone, Facebook, or Skype at least once a week, and 16 percent of them do so daily, the conversation is rarely focused on what their grandparents are doing or have done in the past. There are thirty percent of children who are unaware of their grandparents' special abilities or talents, and four out of ten children are unaware of the accomplishments that their grandparents are most proud of. In addition, 42 percent of people do not spend any time discussing the history of their grandparents, and as a result, they have no idea what their grandmother or grandfather was like when they were still young. With only six percent of children stating that they look up to their grandparents as a role model and inspiration, this lack of communication and respect may be the cause.

Question 34: Which of the following could be the main idea of the passage?

- A. Young people's tendency to neglect their grandparents
- B. Grandparents' loneliness in their old age
- C. Grandparents' attitudes towards youngsters
- D. Young people's disinterest in their grandparents' stories

Question 35: The word “their” in paragraph 2 refers to _____.

- A. older relatives
- B. percents
- C. ages
- D. occupations

Question 36: According to the study in paragraph 2, which information is NOT true?

- A. Nearly a quarter of young people don't have suitable opportunities to talk to older relatives.
- B. Over 50% of the young don't know about their older relatives' past professions.
- C. Most of youths visit their grandparents to ask for pocket money.
- D. Merely one fifth of people in the survey keep asking about the bygone time of their grandparents.

Question 37: The word “occupation” in paragraph 1 is closet in meaning to _____.

- A. request
- B. career
- C. property
- D. notice

Question 38: According to the last paragraph, the proportion of the young voluntarily visiting their older family members every week is _____.

- A. 39%
- B. 27%
- C. 28%
- D. 65%

Question 39: The word “unaware” in paragraph 3 is opposite in meaning to _____.

- A. helpful
- B. careful
- C. hopeful
- D. mindful

Question 40: Which of the following can be inferred from the last paragraph?

- A. Youngsters nowadays are too indifferent to their grandparents' lives in the past.
- B. Most young people use modern technology to keep in touch with their older generation.
- C. Children's lack of communication with grandparents leads to mutual misunderstanding.
- D. Grandchildren never care for their elderly relatives' special skills and talents.

Ngoài ra, 42 phần trăm mọi người không dành thời gian thảo luận về lịch sử của ông bà mình và do đó, chúng không biết bà hoặc ông của mình như thế nào khi chúng còn nhỏ. Chỉ có sáu phần trăm trẻ em nói rằng chúng coi ông bà của mình là hình mẫu và nguồn cảm hứng, thì việc thiếu giao tiếp và tôn trọng này có thể là nguyên nhân.

The significance of getting a good night's sleep is being touted increasingly these days. Our brains and bodies can both benefit from the energy that sleep provides. Our emotions, actions, and recollections can all be impacted.

According to research, people in some nations work longer hours and sleep less. However, adequate sleep is essential for optimal bodily function. Our health can take a serious hit if we consistently lose even a few hours of sleep each night. Our IQ drops, we lose our tempers quickly, and we can't stay focused for long periods. That clarifies why even a highly intelligent person might struggle to complete routine tasks when they don't get enough sleep.

The amount of sleep we require appears to vary with the seasons, according to research. As a general rule, wintertime sleep duration is significantly longer, reaching up to fourteen hours. But during the summer, they can get by on as little as six hours of sleep every night.

Many public awareness campaigns have brought attention to the topic of global warming and its causes, but few have grasped the gravity of the situation. Potentially, one-third of all plant and animal habitats could be altered by the end of the 22nd century due to impending climate change. (29)_____, many species of plants and animals may go extinct all over the world.

Because of the combined effects of both ocean warming and rising sea levels, coastal and island habitats are particularly vulnerable. There will be a lot of pressure on a variety of animals to find new homes as habitats change. It is reasonable to assume (30)_____ some animals will undergo mass migrations, but many will simply lack the (31)_____ speed.

While these gloomy forecasts may make you wince, they are grounded in the relatively moderate assumption that atmospheric carbon dioxide levels will treble by the year 2100. But (32)_____ experts think that's way too conservative, and they say a tripling is much more (33)_____. Someone in Australia who uses Facebook and loves to post news stories on their timeline might have noticed something new: You can't.

However, everything ought to return to normal in the coming days. Facebook has learned from the Australian government that it will not be compelled to pay publishers, but rather given the opportunity to negotiate agreements with them, something it is already beginning to do. This comes less than a week after the company abruptly blocked news links for Australian users and shut down Australian news pages in protest of an impending law. Facebook is reportedly in talks with another firm named Nine Entertainment and has already agreed to pay Seven West Media, a major Australian media company, for news content, as reported in the Sydney Morning Herald.

Facebook and Google may soon be obligated to compensate publishers for hosting their content, as the News Media and Digital Platforms Mandatory Bargaining Code was recently passed in Australia. News organizations all over the globe have been voicing their dissatisfaction with Google and Facebook, along with their massive digital advertising businesses, for years, and this law is a direct result of their demands that these companies do something about the demise of journalism and the internet's impact on their business models. Google struck partnerships with Australian news publishers in response to the then-potential law, while Facebook chose to sever all ties with them.

Following a few days of the Australian public experiencing Facebook without news, a substantial amount of global criticism towards the firm, and discussions with the Australian government leading to a few last-minute amendments to the law, Facebook determined that the revised conditions were satisfactory enough to lift its ban. A few days after that, the bill became law.

Earlier, Facebook had a policy that forbade all users from sharing links to Australian news sites, prevented Australian publications' pages from hosting any content, and forbade all users from sharing links to news sites, worldwide, including those in Australia.

Question 34: Which best serves as the title for the passage?

- A. News Links for Australian Users
- B. Australia and The News Media and Digital Platforms Mandatory Bargaining Code
- C. A Sizable Amount of Worldwide Backlash Against A Company
- D. Why Facebook Banned and Then Unbanned News in Australia

Question 35: The word “them” in paragraph 2 refers to _____.

- A. government
- B. negotiate
- C. opportunity
- D. publishers

Question 36: In paragraph 2, Facebook suddenly banned news links for Australian users to _____.

- A. protest an upcoming law
- B. get reassurances from the Australian government
- C. protect Australian news pages
- D. negotiate agreements with publishers

Question 37: The word “dissatisfaction” in paragraph 3 is closet in meaning to _____.

- A. displeasure
- B. disagree
- C. disconnect
- D. disadvantage

Question 38: The word “condition” in paragraph 4 is opposite in meaning to _____.

- A. essential
- B. fantastic
- C. confident
- D. disqualify

Question 39: Which of the following is NOT true, according to the passage?

- A. Facebook has agreed to pay Seven West Media for news content.
- B. Google and Facebook responded to the law differently.
- C. The laws issued by Australian government was changed at the last minute.
- D. Facebook has never banned users from sharing links to Australian news sources.

Question 40: Which of the following can be inferred from paragraph 4?

- A. Australians will never see the news on Facebook.
- B. Facebook ended its ban thanks to acceptable teams, and things went back to normal.
- C. There was a huge amount of worldwide protest against the Australian government.
- D. Australian government’s law shouldn’t have been changed at the last minute.

Air pollution is a major contributor to global warming because it blocks out the sun's rays. The melting of glaciers, the development of bizarre weather patterns, and the rapid spread of natural disasters are all results of this warming planet.

On the other hand, climate change can have additional, less obvious effects. An unexpected consequence of climate change is that it escalates hostility. Frenzied outbursts are a natural consequence of a warming planet. A recent study indicated that as temperatures increase, the likelihood of violent crimes and even war increases. People are more likely to react physically when the weather is warm, which is why heart rates are higher. That doesn't mean the end of the world is imminent because of global warming. There has been less fighting because of improvements in health and technology. The problem is that this fall might be slowed down by global warming. The Natural Resources Defense Council reports that as a result of climate change, air pollution levels are rising and pollen production is on the rise among plants. Those things add up to make breathing harder, which is a major problem for everyone but notably for those who suffer from asthma and other respiratory illnesses.

The movement of ocean waters as the tides rise and fall is what produces tidal energy. One sustainable energy option is tidal power.

Engineers in the 20th century found ways to harness the power of the tides in places with a large tidal range, or areas that change from high tide to low tide. To harness the power of the tides, each technique employs specialized generators.

The development of tidal energy sources is a relatively new field. There hasn't been much power generated thus far. There is a severe lack of commercial-scale tidal power plants globally. La Rance, France was the site of the first. The tallest building is the South Korean Sihwa Lake Tidal Power Station. There are very few locations in the US where tidal energy could be economically produced, and none of the country's tidal plants are operational. This energy source has considerably more potential for usage in Russia, China, France, and England than in any other country.

Concerns regarding the ownership of underwater land and its potential environmental impact have prompted legal proceedings in the US. Since there is no solid assurance that tidal energy will generate profits or benefit consumers, investors are not very excited about it. To make tidal energy generators more profitable for energy companies while simultaneously reducing their environmental effect, engineers are constantly innovating new ways to harness the power of the tides.

Question 29: Which could be the best title for the passage?

People who support the laws and reporters who write about the issue don't always ask what will be used instead of plastic bags and how that will affect the environment. Folks still need bags to carry their shopping home. And paper bags, which are the most common alternative, might be just as bad or even worse for the environment, depending on what you care about the most.

That's making the movement against bags split. Some bills, like the one in Massachusetts, try to cut down on both plastic and paper bags, but they still favor paper. Some places, like New York City, treat all single-use bags the same. But the question still stands as to whether single-use bags are always worse than reusable ones.

Different studies have come to very different conclusions about how bags affect the environment throughout their lives. Some, like the ironically named American Progressive Bag Alliance, get money from groups that work with the plastics industry. There are a lot of assumptions that go into studies, even ones that were done with the best of intentions. The cotton tote bag can be used instead of how many plastic bags? No need for another small plastic garbage bag if the same bag is used as the bag in the bathroom trash can. Does that reduce the amount of plastic that is used?

Things get even less clear if climate change is your main concern. An Australian state government agency published one of the most in-depth studies on the environmental effects of bags in 2007. It found that paper bags leave a bigger carbon footprint than plastic bags. The main reason for this is that making and transporting paper bags uses more energy.

"Because the paper breaks down, people think it's better for the environment, but it's not in terms of climate change," says David Tyler, a chemistry professor at the University of Oregon who has looked at the research on how bag use affects the environment. There are many reasons why paper has a bigger carbon footprint than plastic, but one of the main ones is that paper bags are thicker than plastic bags. Tyler says, "In a broad sense, carbon footprints are related to the mass of an object." For instance, more trucks are needed to deliver paper bags to a store than plastic bags because paper bags take up more space.

Question 34: Which is the most suitable title for the passage?

A. Paper bags are a good substitute for plastic ones.

Scientists are warning that climate change is making tropical storms worse as Hurricane Florence heads toward the Southeast US. The strong Category 4 Atlantic weather front is moving slowly, which is happening more and more often and poses a different kind of threat to the states that are in its path.

Florence could stop moving altogether over land, which could cause huge amounts of rain to fall quickly, which could cause severe flash flooding.

Large waves and strong winds from faster storms moving inland from the ocean are very dangerous to people and property, but heavy rain can be just as bad, if not worse. In August 2017, Hurricane Harvey hit Houston, Texas, dumping 60 inches of rain on the city. This flooded the streets and killed 93 people. The damage was worth millions of dollars, and hundreds more people required boat rescue.

According to a study published in June by the journal Nature, James Kossin of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, slow-moving tropical cyclones like Florence and Harvey have become more common over the last 70 years. In that time, they have become 10 percent slower. As a result of human-made air pollution, Mr. Kossin says, global warming is making the poles warmer. This lowers the temperature difference between the Arctic and Antarctic and the equator, which changes the atmospheric pressure and slows down the strong winds that blow between the poles and cause hurricanes.

Question 29: The best title for this passage could be

- A. Danger of hurricane in US.
- B. Climate change and the threat from tropical storms.
- C. Climate change and people activities.

D. Storms cause millions of dollars-worth of damage.

Question 30: The word “its” in paragraph 1 refers to _____.

- A. Hurricane Florence B. Scientists C. The states D. The Southeast

Question 31: The word “recuse” in paragraph 2 is closet in meaning to _____.

- A. remain B. fasten C. keep D. save

Question 32: Which statement about Hurricane Harvey is probably TRUE according to the passage?

- A. It caused the floods in all the streets in US.
B. It caused a significant danger to people and property.
C. It made citizens in Texas suffer from floods and damage
D. It made residents lose thousands of dollars

Question 33: In the 3rd paragraph, James Kossin suggests that

- A. Over the last 70 years, human activities have made global warming worse
B. Over the last 70 years, people cause the poles to become hotter
C. Over the last 70 years, Florence and Harvey are common in Texas
D. Over the last 70 years, slow-moving tropical cyclones have become more common

In 2010, the world's carbon dioxide emissions from burning fossil fuels rose by the most ever seen. A report released on Sunday by the Global Carbon Project says that emissions went up 5.9 percent in 2010. Analysts said it was likely the biggest jump in any single year since the start of the Industrial Revolution. This was the latest in a long line of rising emissions that will make it hard, if not impossible, to stop severe climate change in the next few decades.

The burning of coal represented more than half of the growth in emissions, the analysis found. A new study shows that between 2009 and 2010, emissions in the US dropped by an amazing 7%. However, they rose by over 4% in 2010.

Every year, emissions go up, and there are talks and no decisions. This is what researcher Glen P. Peters at the Center for International Climate and Environmental Research said. "There are no signs that we will change the path we've been on for the past 10 years."

Scientists say that the fast rise in emissions is making the Earth warmer and endangering people's health and safety in the long term. But their increasingly urgent calls for people to find a way to cut down on emissions have been met with strong political opposition in many countries, where doing so would mean higher energy costs.

As expected, the new numbers show that developing countries are now putting out more greenhouse gases than rich countries. The new study found that burning fossil fuels and making cement released more than nine billion tons of carbon into the air in 2010. Of that amount, 57% came from developing countries.

At first glance, the numbers from the past few years look like they show that rich countries have made progress in lowering their emissions. But Dr. Peters said that in a way, the rich countries have just sent some of them to other places.

One of the primary causes for the fast rise in developing countries is the growth of manufacturing industries that use a lot of energy to make goods that rich countries buy. "The only thing that has changed is where the emissions are coming from," Dr. Peters said.

As a way to deal with the economic downturn, many countries spent billions of dollars on programs that made their energy systems greener. It's possible, but the new numbers show that they haven't changed much so far.

Question 34: What is the main idea of this passage?

- A. An analysis released by the Global Carbon Project
B. The record jump in carbon dioxide emissions
C. The possible climate change in future decades
D. The main harm of greenhouse gases

Question 35: According to Glen P. Peters, we can learn that _____.

- A. The rapid growth of emissions contributes to potential risks for humans
B. Rich countries actually take more responsibility for the growth of emissions
C. Human beings will follow the same path of negotiations in the next 10 years
D. Some countries negotiate together yearly whether to reduce the amounts of emissions

Question 36: The word “severe” in paragraph 2 is closet in meaning to _____.

- A. regrettable B. component C. famous D. serious

Question 37: The word “their” in paragraph 5 refers to _____.

Question 38: Which of the following is TRUE according to the text?

- A. Emissions in the United States dropped by about 7 percent in 2010.
B. Developing countries will produce less emissions with economic development.
C. There is a long way to go for many countries to limit the fast growth of emissions.
D. Over 50 percent of the growth in emissions resulted from the burning of fossil fuels.

Question 39: The word “downturn” in the last paragraph is opposite in meaning to _____.

- A. advantage B. occurrence C. influence D. upswing

Question 40: Which of the following can be inferred from the paragraph?

- A. Compared to developed countries, developing countries release more greenhouse gases into the atmosphere.
B. Political opposition and economic considerations are hindering changes.
C. The Industrial Revolution is the main cause of carbon dioxide emissions.
D. The rise in emissions and human health.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct option that best fits each of the numbered blanks from 29 to 33.

War is terrible for people, but it's great for heavy metal. Fans of the Swedish rock band Sabaton say that their militaristic concept albums are the best of the best. "The Trooper" by Iron Maiden. "War Pigs" by Black Sabbath. Steely Dan's "One." Slayer's "Angel of Death." That is a pretty cool playlist. Still, it's unlikely that anyone will ever be as dedicated as Swedish power metal band Sabaton to writing songs about people killing each other and destroying things. It should be made clear that Sabaton is the name of a band, not a piece of armor that knights wore on their feet in the Middle Ages. Sun Tzu, an ancient Chinese military strategist, wrote a lot of important books that the Swedes used as inspiration for their fourth album, "The Art Of War," which came out in 2008. They also usually play in front of a tank when they're on stage.

The theme this time is the First World War. The band has been together for 20 years. Sabaton are without a doubt one of the best bands out there if you like this kind of music—powerful, rough, operatic, and performed with no sense of irony at all. "Fields of Verdun" gets off to a huge hook that's only topped by the song's killer chorus. In the first song, "The Future Of Warfare," singer Joakim Brodén's vocals build a way up, "while" Devil Dogs go on rampages like Iron Maiden did when punk was still a part of their sound. This is the album that Sabaton could use to get better.

Even though the themes are heavy, Sabaton should be praised for how they handle often difficult ones while still making the music fun, which is something that many bands in their genre have lost sight of lately. They also show respect for the dead.

Question 29: Which best serves as the title for the passage?

- A. The influence that the history of human combat on rock music.
 B. The Swedish metal band just release their eighth album.
 C. Power metal band Sabaton puts historical spin on albums.
 D. New album with the First World War concept from Sabaton.

Question 30: The word "their" in paragraph 1 refers to _____.

- A. knights B. songs C. Devil Dogs D. important books

Question 31: The word "inspiration" in paragraph 1 is closet in meaning to _____.

- A. mention B. preparation C. motivation D. education

Question 32: According to paragraph 2, what is NOT mentioned about the metal band Sabaton?

- A. Performing their songs with a tank as stage props is one of their trademarks.
 B. In 2008, Sabaton released its fourth "The Art of War" inspired by Sun Tzu.
 C. Their discography includes Primo Victoria, Attero Dominatus, Coat of Arms, Carolus Rex, Heroes, and The Last Stand.
 D. Swedish rockers Sabaton's name is a reference to a sabaton, knight's foot armor.

Question 33: According to paragraph 3, what is the tone of this descriptive paragraph?

- A. Laudatory B. Indignant C. Euphemistic D. Provocative

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct option that best fits each of the numbered blanks from 34 to 40

Having a green lifestyle is becoming more and more important as we deal with the effects of climate change and environmental damage. Green living includes a lot of different things that we can do to help the environment and keep natural resources safe for future generations. There are a lot of small and big things that each person can do to help make the world a better place to live.

Saving energy is a key part of living in a green way. This can be done by doing small things like turning off lights when you leave a room, unplugging electronics when they're not in use, and buying appliances that use less energy. Also, using less fossil fuels and more renewable energy sources, like solar or wind power, is a key part of slowing down climate change.

Using less trash is another important part of living a green life. This means using less, reusing things, and recycling as much as possible. To reduce waste and protect resources, pick products with little packaging, compost your food waste, and give away gently used items. A minimalist lifestyle can also help people put experiences ahead of things, which can lead to a more sustainable and satisfying way of life.

Using environmentally friendly transportation methods is also important for cutting down on carbon emissions and cleaning up the air. Walking, biking, carpooling, and taking the bus are all eco-friendly ways to get around instead of driving alone. Buying electric or hybrid cars is another way to lower your carbon footprint and help clean up the air.

Green living is supported by both individual actions and participation in the community. You can bring about positive change on a larger scale by getting involved in local environmental projects, supporting eco-friendly businesses, and speaking out for policies that will last. By working together, communities can make people more aware of the environment and build a better future for everyone.

To sum up, going green is important for building a sustainable future. People can help protect the planet in important ways by using less energy, throwing away less trash, using environmentally friendly transportation, and getting involved in community projects. By working together and making smart choices, we can make the world a healthier and more stable place for future generations.

Question 34: What is the main idea of this passage?

- A. Reducing carbon emissions for green living
- B. Promoting sustainable transportation in the future
- C. Embracing green living for a sustainable future
- D. Encouraging minimalism in lifestyle choices for green living

Question 35: According to the passage, what are some actions individuals can take to minimize waste?

- A. Using energy-efficient appliances to reduce waste
- B. Investing in renewable energy sources to minimize waste
- C. Donating gently used items and composting organic waste
- D. Participating in local environmental initiatives

Question 36: The word “renewable” in paragraph 2 is closest in meaning to _____.
 A. dependence B. perpetual C. decrease D. essential

Question 37: The word “This” in paragraph 3 refers to _____.
 A. using less trash B. solar or wind power
 C. using less fossil fuels D. future generations

Question 38: The word “positive” in paragraph 5 is opposite in meaning to _____.
 A. unsure B. unmade C. unable D. unaware

Question 39: Which of the following is NOT mentioned as a way to reduce waste in the passage?

- A. Using energy-efficient appliances B. Donating gently used items
- C. Composting organic waste D. Buying products with excessive packaging

Question 40: What can be inferred from the passage about the importance of community involvement in green living?

- A. Community involvement has no impact on promoting green living.
- B. Individual actions are more effective than community efforts.
- C. Community involvement is essential for promoting green living on a larger scale.
- D. Community involvement is only necessary for large cities, not small communities.
