Ba lives in a village by Mekong River. Every day, like most of his friends, he walks to school. It is three kilometers away. After class, he often helps his mother to collect water from the river and feed the chickens. At the weekend, the villagers often gather at the community hall where there is a TV. The adults watch TV, but more often they talk about their farm work and exchange news. The children run around, playing games and shouting merrily. Laughter is heard everywhere.

Ba's father sometimes takes him to the market town nearby where his father sells some home products like vegetables, fruits, eggs… His father then buys him an ice cream and lets him take a ride on the electric train in the town square. He loves those trips.

On starry nights, children lie on the grass, looking at the sky and daring each other to find the Milky Way. They dream of faraway places.
