Many people enjoy living in a big city because they think life is more exciting there. (19)_____. The main reason I prefer village life is because it's very quiet, so I always feel calm when I'm here. Another reason is that the air is so fresh and clean. (20)_____. In addition, I think the people here are friendlier. Personally, I'm interested in wildlife photography, so the countryside is perfect for me.

The only downside is transport. (21)_____. Also, it's boring sometimes, but I enjoy chatting to my friends. Fortunately, I'm learning to ride a moped. On balance, I disagree that city life is better, as I think my village lifestyle is healthier and more relaxing. In spite of that, some of my friends couldn't cope with life in the country, so it comes down to personal opinion. For me, the peaceful lifestyle is worth the longer journeys. (22)_____. In the future, I would still like to live in the countryside even if I work in a city.

A. I have an early start for a long journey to school in Faro and the school bus is always stopping to pick up more people

B. However, I come from a small village and in my view, there are lots of benefits

C. We have more green spaces and bigger gardens, too

D. I feel that growing up in a village makes me more connected to nature

Read the following passage and choose the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions.

One of the most obvious negative aspects of social networking is losing face-to-face contact with other people. Teens are sitting around with their phones in their hands all day long, tapping messages onto screens instead of communicating with real people. Many teenagers feel more comfortable with virtual friends than with real ones. The majority think that it is easier to chat on the Internet because they lack communication skills.

It is also true that parents often have no knowledge about what their kids do with their phones or computers. Crosby says that, "While kids are plugged in to social media, only about 40% of parents are involved themselves." And because parents don't know the full picture, they also don't know how to deal with a teenager's potential overuse of social media and might not even be aware that a problem exists. Therefore, social networking can be much more immediately engaging with the teenager's life than parents are, and this fact makes virtual communication feel more "real" than face-to-face communication. In the long run, this may create a generation that struggles with real-life social interactions. Some teenagers even develop anxiety or stress when they are away from their devices. To prevent these negative effects, parents and schools should guide young people on how to balance online and offline life. Only with proper guidance can social networking be a useful tool instead of a harmful one.

Question 28. What is the main idea of the passage?

- A. Parents should use social networks more to understand their children.                              C. Social networking brings negative effects to student's face-to-face communication.

Read the following passage and choose the letter A, B, C or D to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions.

In many cultures, family meals are an important tradition. It is a time for family members to come together, share their daily experiences, and enjoy delicious food. This tradition helps to strengthen family bonds and create lasting memories. In today's fast-paced world, many families find it difficult to have regular meals together. Parents often have busy work schedules, and children are involved in many extracurricular activities.

However, experts suggest that families should try to have at least a few meals together each week. Studies show that children who eat regularly with their families tend to do better in school and have better communication skills. Family meals also provide an opportunity for parents to teach their children about good eating habits and table manners.

To make family meals more enjoyable, everyone should participate in the preparation and cleanup. Parents can involve children in simple tasks like setting the table or washing vegetables. This not only teaches them responsibility but also makes them feel like a valued part of the family. During the meal, it is important to turn off the television and put away electronic devices to encourage conversation.

Volunteering

Many teenagers in Viet Nam enjoy taking part in volunteer work because they want to make their community a better place. They often spend their free time helping people in the countryside by teaching small children how to read and write, repairing old houses for poor families, or cleaning the streets to make the environment greener and cleaner. Some groups of students collect old clothes, books, and toys to give to disadvantaged children, while others organize fundraising events to support people in need. In addition, there are students who spend their weekends working in hospitals to take care of sick people or visiting nursing homes to bring happiness to the elderly.

Volunteering is not only helpful for the community but also very meaningful for the students themselves. Through these activities, they can learn important life skills such as teamwork, problem-solving, and responsibility. They also gain confidence by communicating with different people and feel proud when they see the positive results of their work. Moreover, volunteering offers them opportunities to make new friends, share experiences, and discover new talents. Read the following passage and choose the letter A, B, C or D.

Recycling is the process of converting waste materials into new materials and objects. It is an essential practice for protecting our environment. One of the main benefits of recycling is that it reduces the amount of waste sent to landfills. Landfills take up a lot of space and can release harmful chemicals into the soil and water.

By recycling, we also conserve natural resources. For example, recycling paper and wood saves trees and forests. Recycling plastic means creating less new plastic, which is made from fossil fuels. This helps to reduce air and water pollution.

Furthermore, recycling saves energy. It usually takes less energy to make products from recycled materials than from raw materials. For instance, producing aluminum from recycled cans uses 95% less energy than producing it from its raw ore.

However, for recycling to be effective, everyone needs to participate. We should sort our waste properly into different bins for paper, plastic, glass, and metal. With collective effort, recycling can make a significant difference to the health of our planet.

The Eiffel Tower is one of the most famous landmarks in the world. Located on the Champ de Mars in Paris, France, it was designed by the engineer Gustave Eiffel and was built as the entrance arch for the 1889 World's Fair. Initially, it was criticized by some of France's leading artists and intellectuals for its design, but it has since become a global cultural icon of France and one of the most recognizable structures in the world.

The tower is 330 meters tall, about the same height as an 81-storey building, and it was the tallest man-made structure in the world for 41 years until the Chrysler Building in New York City was finished in 1930. The tower has three levels for visitors, with restaurants on the first and second levels. The top level's upper platform is 276 meters above the ground – the highest observation deck accessible to the public in the European Union.

Every year, millions of people visit the Eiffel Tower. They can use elevators or climb the stairs to reach the observation decks. The Great Wall of China is one of the most impressive structures ever built. It is not a single wall but a series of walls and fortifications stretching for thousands of kilometers across northern China. The construction of the wall started more than 2,000 years ago to protect Chinese states and empires against raids and invasions from various nomadic groups of the Eurasian Steppe.

The most well-known and best-preserved sections of the Great Wall were built during the Ming Dynasty (1368–1644). These sections were built using bricks and stone, making them much stronger than the earlier walls, which were mostly made of earth and wood. The wall is also famous for its watchtowers, which were used to store weapons, house troops, and send smoke signals.

Today, the Great Wall of China is a UNESCO World Heritage site and a major tourist attraction. Millions of visitors from all over the world come to walk along this incredible piece of history.
