No more kangaroo skins!

Nike, one of the world's largest sportswear companies, has announced that it will no longer use kangaroo leather in the production of its shoes starting in 2023. This decision is a significant step towards wildlife protection, particularly in Australia, where millions of kangaroos are killed every year.

The use of kangaroo skin in athletic shoes has always caused a lot of anger among environmental groups due to the cruel practices involved in the commercial killing of kangaroos. Many have called for a ban on the use of kangaroo leather in products, and Nike's announcement is a step towards that goal.

Nike will instead produce a new version of its popular football boots made from a new synthetic material that provides better performance. The company's decision to replace kangaroo leather with a synthetic material is also in line with the growing trend among luxury brands to ban the use of kangaroo skin in their products. Other major brands such as Puma, Versace, and Prada have already taken similar steps.

While Nike's decision has been widely applauded, there are concerns about the impact on the commercial kangaroo industry in Australia. Its supporters believe that banning the use of kangaroo leather in products would have negative economic impacts on the industry, despite the environmental benefits. The commercial killing of kangaroos is legal in Australia and kangaroo products are also considered by some to be a sustainable option, as their carbon footprint is believed to be a lot lower than that of cattle and sheep.

Nike's decision to stop using kangaroo leather in its products is a positive step towards wildlife protection. However, it is also important to consider its impact on the commercial kangaroo industry and the need for sustainable and humane management of kangaroo populations.

Question 26. What is the main focus of the passage?

- A. The disagreements surrounding the use of kangaroo leather in athletic shoes.

- A. criticised

- A. Because it is an expensive material that not many people can afford.
- B. Because kangaroos are a rare and endangered animal species.
- C. Because the commercial killing of kangaroos is considered cruel.
- D. Because it has a negative impact on the environment.

No more kangaroo skins!

Nike, one of the world's largest sportswear companies, has announced that it will no longer use kangaroo leather in the production of its shoes starting in 2023. This decision is a significant step towards wildlife protection, particularly in Australia, where millions of kangaroos are killed every year.

The use of kangaroo skin in athletic shoes has always caused a lot of anger among environmental groups due to the cruel practices involved in the commercial killing of kangaroos. Many have called for a ban on the use of kangaroo leather in products, and Nike's announcement is a step towards that goal.

Nike will instead produce a new version of its popular football boots made from a new synthetic material that provides better performance. The company's decision to replace kangaroo leather with a synthetic material is also in line with the growing trend among luxury brands to ban the use of kangaroo skin in their products. Other major brands such as Puma, Versace, and Prada have already taken similar steps.

While Nike's decision has been widely applauded, there are concerns about the impact on the commercial kangaroo industry in Australia. Its supporters believe that banning the use of kangaroo leather in products would have negative economic impacts on the industry, despite the environmental benefits. The commercial killing of kangaroos is legal in Australia and kangaroo products are also considered by some to be a sustainable option, as their carbon footprint is believed to be a lot lower than that of cattle and sheep.

Nike's decision to stop using kangaroo leather in its products is a positive step towards wildlife protection. However, it is also important to consider its impact on the commercial kangaroo industry and the need for sustainable and humane management of kangaroo populations.

Question 26. What is the main focus of the passage?

- A. The disagreements surrounding the use of kangaroo leather in athletic shoes.

- D. Because it has a negative impact on the environment.

Wildlife conservation is the practice of protecting wild animals and their habitats. Many species are endangered because of human activities such as deforestation, pollution, and illegal hunting. Conservation efforts aim to prevent species from becoming extinct and to maintain biodiversity.

One way to protect wildlife is by creating national parks and nature reserves. These areas provide a safe environment for animals to live and reproduce without human interference. Governments and organizations also work to stop illegal hunting and trading of wild animals. Laws and regulations are important tools in protecting endangered species.

Another method of conservation is breeding programs in zoos. Some animals are taken from the wild and raised in controlled environments to increase their population. Once their numbers grow, they may be released back into their natural habitats. This method has helped save species such as the giant panda and the Arabian oryx.

Educating people about wildlife conservation is also essential. Schools, social media, and documentaries help raise awareness about the importance of protecting nature. People are encouraged to reduce waste, recycle, and support organizations that work to save animals and their homes.

CCTV cameras were initially developed as a means of security for banks. In Britain they first appeared in 1953 and by the 1960s, there were already a few cameras in major streets in London. Today, there are more than four million CCTV cameras across the country. That's one camera for every fourteen people. The cameras are there to film dangerous or illegal behaviour. With new software, they can automatically recognize the faces of known offenders, and a new kind of CCTV in the Netherlands can detect angry voices and automatically warn the police of trouble. Some CCTV cameras can even interact with the people they are watching. But these cameras don't just watch criminals; they watch all of us, almost all of the time.

The amount of surveillance in towns and cities across Britain is increasing because it is thought to deter crime. Some goods in shops now have RFID tags (radio frequency identification tags) attached to them. When you pick up one of these items, the RFID tag sends a radio message to a CCTV camera and the camera starts filming you. Shops say that this technology helps to catch shoplifters - but only by treating everybody as a potential criminal.

Cameras and tags are not the only ways of monitoring our actions. Every time you make or receive a call on your mobile phone, the phone company knows the number of the phone you are calling and how long the call lasts. It is even possible to work out your exact location. The police often use this information when they're investigating serious crimes.

Even when you are at home, you are not necessarily safe from surveillance. High-speed internet connections have made computers more vulnerable than ever before. When you use your computer to visit websites, you are probably sending and receiving ‘cookies’ without realizing it. Cookies transfer information from your computer to the website and, in theory, could record which websites you visit. Modern technology is making it easier and easier to stay in contact, but it is also making it nearly impossible for us to hide.

(Adapted from Aim High by Tim Falla and Paul A Davies)

No more kangaroo skins!

Nike, one of the world's largest sportswear companies, has announced that it will no longer use kangaroo leather in the production of its shoes starting in 2023. This decision is a significant step towards wildlife protection, particularly in Australia, where millions of kangaroos are killed every year.

The use of kangaroo skin in athletic shoes has always caused a lot of anger among environmental groups due to the cruel practices involved in the commercial killing of kangaroos. Many have called for a ban on the use of kangaroo leather in products, and Nike's announcement is a step towards that goal.

Nike will instead produce a new version of its popular football boots made from a new synthetic material that provides better performance. The company's decision to replace kangaroo leather with a synthetic material is also in line with the growing trend among luxury brands to ban the use of kangaroo skin in their products. Other major brands such as Puma, Versace, and Prada have already taken similar steps.

While Nike's decision has been widely applauded, there are concerns about the impact on the commercial kangaroo industry in Australia. Its supporters believe that banning the use of kangaroo leather in products would have negative economic impacts on the industry, despite the environmental benefits. The commercial killing of kangaroos is legal in Australia and kangaroo products are also considered by some to be a sustainable option, as their carbon footprint is believed to be a lot lower than that of cattle and sheep.

Nike's decision to stop using kangaroo leather in its products is a positive step towards wildlife protection. However, it is also important to consider its impact on the commercial kangaroo industry and the need for sustainable and humane management of kangaroo populations.

Question 26. What is the main focus of the passage?

- A. The disagreements surrounding the use of kangaroo leather in athletic shoes.
 B. Nike's decision to stop using kangaroo leather in its products.
 C. The commercial kangaroo industry in Australia and its impact on wildlife.

Question 30. According to the passage, why has the use of kangaroo leather in athletic shoes caused anger among environmental groups?

- A. Because it is an expensive material that not many people can afford.

No more kangaroo skins!

Nike, one of the world's largest sportswear companies, has announced that it will no longer use kangaroo leather in the production of its shoes starting in 2023. This decision is a significant step towards wildlife protection, particularly in Australia, where millions of kangaroos are killed every year.

The use of kangaroo skin in athletic shoes has always caused a lot of anger among environmental groups due to the cruel practices involved in the commercial killing of kangaroos. Many have called for a ban on the use of kangaroo leather in products, and Nike's announcement is a step towards that goal.

Nike will instead produce a new version of its popular football boots made from a new synthetic material that provides better performance. The company's decision to replace kangaroo leather with a synthetic material is also in line with the growing trend among luxury brands to ban the use of kangaroo skin in their products. Other major brands such as Puma, Versace, and Prada have already taken similar steps.

While Nike's decision has been widely applauded, there are concerns about the impact on the commercial kangaroo industry in Australia. Its supporters believe that banning the use of kangaroo leather in products would have negative economic impacts on the industry, despite the environmental benefits. The commercial killing of kangaroos is legal in Australia and kangaroo products are also considered by some to be a sustainable option, as their carbon footprint is believed to be a lot lower than that of cattle and sheep.

Nike's decision to stop using kangaroo leather in its products is a positive step towards wildlife protection. However, it is also important to consider its impact on the commercial kangaroo industry and the need for sustainable and humane management of kangaroo populations.

Question 26. What is the main focus of the passage?

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D to indicate the answer to each of the following question from 26 to 30.

Global sea level has been rising over the past century, and the rate has increased in recent decades. In 2014, global sea level was 2.6 inches above the 1993 average - the highest annual average in the satellite record (1993-present).

Sea level continues to rise at a rate of about one eighth of an inch per year. Higher sea levels mean that deadly and destructive storm surges push farther inland than they once did, which also means more frequent nuisance flooding. Disruptive and expensive, nuisance flooding is estimated to be from 300 percent to 900 percent more frequent within U.S. coastal communities than it was just 50 years ago.

The two major causes of global sea level rise are thermal expansion caused by warming of the ocean since water expands as it warms, and increased melting of land-based ice, such as glaciers and ice sheets. The oceans are absorbing more than 90 percent of the increased atmospheric heat associated with emissions from human activity.

With continued ocean and atmospheric warming, sea levels will likely rise for many centuries at rates higher than that of the current century. In the United States, almost 40 percent of the population lives in relatively high population-density coastal areas, where sea level plays a role in flooding, shoreline erosion, and hazards from storms. Globally, eight of the world's 10 largest cities are near a coast, according to the U.N. Atlas of the Oceans.

- A. An increasing rate of sea level rise
- B. Sea level within U.S. coastal communities
- C. Sea level and its effects on the world's largest cities
- D. Sea level and emissions from human activity

Question 27: Which of the following statements is TRUE according to the last paragraph?

- A. Sea levels will likely rise for many centuries at rates of the current century.
- B. Sea level has no relation to flooding, shoreline erosion, and hazards from storms.
- C. Nearly 40 percent of the population of the US lives in densely populated coastal areas.
- D. Sea level rise will only affect the world's largest cities near the coast.

Question 28: According to paragraph 3, all of the following are the major causes of global sea level rise EXCEPT _____

- A. population density B. human activity
- C. ice melting D. thermal expansion

Question 29: The word "rise" in paragraph 2 is closest in meaning to _____ Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D to indicate the answer to each of the question from 26 to 30.

Wildlife conservation is all about protecting animals and their natural environments to ensure they can survive and thrive. Many animals are in danger due to human activities. One major threat is deforestation, which happens when forests are cut down for farming or construction. This destruction removes the homes of many animals, leaving them without food and shelter. Another serious problem is pollution. Harmful chemicals from factories and cars can contaminate air, water, and soil, making it dangerous for animals to live. Hunting is also a big concern. Animals are often hunted for their fur, tusks, or other body parts, which can lead to their numbers decreasing and, in some cases, extinction - a situation where an animal species disappears completely.

To address these issues, countries around the world have set up national parks and wildlife reserves. These are protected areas where animals can live safely, away from human disturbances. In these places, animals can find the food and shelter they need to survive and reproduce. Additionally, many zoos and wildlife centers work on breeding programs for endangered species. These programs help increase the number of animals in captivity, and once their populations are healthy enough, some can be reintroduced into the wild.

Education plays a crucial role in wildlife conservation. By learning about the importance of protecting wildlife and their habitats, people are more likely to support conservation efforts. Governments and organizations also create laws to protect animals and their environments. Although there are many challenges in wildlife conservation, continuing these efforts is vital. It helps to ensure that future generations can enjoy a world with a rich variety of animals and natural beauty.

Nam: Hi, Mai. How's your mid-term project going?

Mai: Good! I'm trying to complete it by next Monday. But I'm still working on the last part: saving endangered animals. Do you have any ideas, Nam?

Nam: Well, I think the first thing you should do is help people understand the importance of this problem.

Mai: Yes, I agree. Some people think this is a natural process that would happen with or without humans. They also believe that's not their responsibility.

Nam: You should also do some research on the number of endangered animals. We are losing animals quicker now than ever before. And one of the reasons is illegal hunting.

Mai: Yes, hunting causes a lot of suffering to wild animals. It destroys their natural habitats, and leaves baby animals behind to die.

Nam: Well, I think strict laws can really help. Heavy punishment may prevent people from illegal hunting. Besides, wildlife trade should be banned as well.

Mai: That would stop illegal hunting. Any more ideas, Nam?

Nam: And we should make sure that the souvenirs we buy on holiday are not made from endangered animal parts.

Mai: That's true. Thanks, Nam! You've been so helpful.

PART 2

F: I found out about a website that helps you improve your English.

M: Who told you about it? Sarah from work?

F: (11) Actually I saw an advert during my favourite TV programme, English Fun, the one we used to listen to on the radio.

M: I got tired of it. It got so boring.

F: (12) It's funny you should say that, but the online radio shows are nothing like that. (13) Their clever advice has really helped me.

M: (13) We should tell Ms Jessica about it. My cousin has a lesson with her today. So do you spend a lot of time on it?

F: On Friday I was on it for an hour and a half, (14) yesterday about three quarters of an hour and today maybe I'll find an hour to read some articles.

M: Are there articles too?

F: Yes, on different levels and some of them also have a video. If you are not sure about your English level, you can ask an online teacher.

M: (15) The only way I'd read an article is if I were to watch something about it. So I'm going to contact a teacher on the website and get started.

F: Great!

Sturgeon and paddlefish - freshwater fish have existed for hundreds of millions of years - now face extinction mainly (21) the illegal trade in wild-caught caviar and meat. The world's first comprehensive assessment of the species in over 13 years, released today by the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN), confirmed that all 26 remaining species are now threatened with extinction.

The new assessment highlights that (22) two-thirds of sturgeon and paddlefish species are now critically endangered on the IUCN Red List of Threatened Species, (23) makes them among the world's most threatened species. The assessment also officially declares the extinction of the Chinese paddlefish, the extinction in the wild of the Yangtze sturgeon.

Poaching sturgeon for the illegal trade in wild-caught caviar and meat is one of the leading causes of their extinction. Last year, WWF revealed that one-third of caviar and meat products sold in the lower Danube region were sold illegally. Hydropower dams blocking migration routes, unsustainable mining destroying (24) grounds, and habitat loss are other major threats to the species.

IUCN, the World Sturgeon Conservation Society, and WWF are working with partners to safeguard these species through (25) research, raising awareness, and directly engaging in conservation projects to shorten the gap between science and management.

Lifelong learning is an essential part of personal and professional development. It is a continuous process that helps individuals stay relevant in their fields, keep up with changes in trends and adapt to uncertainty.

Curiosity is the spark that ignites the fire of learning. It is the desire to explore, question and discover new knowledge and experiences, which is required for lifelong learning. Albert Einstein is often credited with saying, “I have no special talents. I am only passionately curious.”

Curiosity is the fuel that makes individuals seek out new information, skills and perspectives.

Curious people listen and approach interactions with the hope of learning something valuable. When someone is sincerely interested in something, they tend to listen more closely - determined to uncover the facts, seek out answers and pile up deep knowledge along the way.

With more information and details at their disposal, they tend to be more motivated, more focused and, ultimately, more productive. Research also shows “curiosity to be associated with higher levels of positive emotions, lower levels of anxiety, and more satisfaction with life.” However, curiosity is only the driving force for the journey of lifelong learning.

Sturgeon and paddlefish - freshwater fish have existed for hundreds of millions of years - now face extinction mainly (21) the illegal trade in wild-caught caviar and meat. The world's first comprehensive assessment of the species in over 13 years, released today by the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN), confirmed that all 26 remaining species are now threatened with extinction.

The new assessment highlights that (22) two-thirds of sturgeon and paddlefish species are now critically endangered on the IUCN Red List of Threatened Species, (23) makes them among the world's most threatened species. The assessment also officially declares the extinction of the Chinese paddlefish, the extinction in the wild of the Yangtze sturgeon.

Poaching sturgeon for the illegal trade in wild-caught caviar and meat is one of the leading causes of their extinction. Last year, WWF revealed that one-third of caviar and meat products sold in the lower Danube region were sold illegally. Hydropower dams blocking migration routes, unsustainable mining destroying (24) grounds, and habitat loss are other major threats to the species.

IUCN, the World Sturgeon Conservation Society, and WWF are working with partners to safeguard these species through (25) research, raising awareness, and directly engaging in conservation projects to shorten the gap between science and management.

Lifelong learning is an essential part of personal and professional development. It is a continuous process that helps individuals stay relevant in their fields, keep up with changes in trends and adapt to uncertainty.

Curiosity is the spark that ignites the fire of learning. It is the desire to explore, question and discover new knowledge and experiences, which is required for lifelong learning. Albert Einstein is often credited with saying, “I have no special talents. I am only passionately curious.”

Curiosity is the fuel that makes individuals seek out new information, skills and perspectives.

Curious people listen and approach interactions with the hope of learning something valuable. When someone is sincerely interested in something, they tend to listen more closely - determined to uncover the facts, seek out answers and pile up deep knowledge along the way.

With more information and details at their disposal, they tend to be more motivated, more focused and, ultimately, more productive. Research also shows “curiosity to be associated with higher levels of positive emotions, lower levels of anxiety, and more satisfaction with life.” However, curiosity is only the driving force for the journey of lifelong learning.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D to indicate the correct answer to each of the following questions from 26 to 30.

Russia is on track to introduce its first cancer vaccine by early 2025, marking a significant milestone in medical innovation. This vaccine is developed by a Russian team in collaboration with major research institutions, including the Moscow State University and the Cancer Research Institute. It uses cutting-edge mRNA technology, which has already proven effective in COVID-19 vaccines, to target specific tumor cells and stimulate the body's immune response to fight cancer more effectively.

The vaccine is currently undergoing the final stages of clinical trials. These trials are designed to evaluate its safety and efficacy in treating certain types of cancers, particularly those related to lung and liver, which are among the most common globally. Preliminary results suggest that this vaccine could significantly improve survival rates and reduce recurrence risks for cancer patients, bringing hope to millions worldwide.

However, accessibility and affordability remain critical concerns. Experts highlight the potential challenge of high production costs, which may limit access to this life-saving innovation in lower-income regions. To address this, Russia is exploring partnerships with global health organizations and pharmaceutical companies to scale production and distribution. This effort aims to make the vaccine available to a broader population and integrate it into public health systems.

The introduction of this vaccine aligns with the growing global momentum in cancer prevention and treatment. Similar initiatives, such as trials conducted by BioNTech in the UK, underline the global effort to combat cancer with advanced technologies. If successful, Russia's vaccine could complement these efforts, marking a new era in the fight against one of the world's leading causes of death.
