“Do you know what you want to do in the future?” It’s an all-important question that you’re likely to hear more often as you near the end of your high school. From meetings with career advisors to advice from families and relatives, everything seems (22) _____.

(23) _____, the truth is, it’s completely acceptable to not be one hundred percent sure. After all, after years of planned lessons, revision, finishing up exams, and finally receiving your results, you’re making your biggest decision.

Maybe English was always your best subject, and you want to go on to study literature, but you’re not sure (24) _____. The truth is, you may end up doing something that doesn't even exist yet. Taking a look at some of the emerging careers from the last few years, there are a ton.

Social media influencers and YouTubers didn't exist over 10 years ago, and until a few years ago, (25) _____. While these careers didn't exist years ago, they've now caused major shifts in their respective industries. The point is, (26) _____, so does the job market, and so do the future career opportunities available to you. So, you've finished school. Congratulations are in order - but what now? Whatever your choice, planning for the future doesn't need to be hard.

Question 22.

- A. revolve on your future career
- B. to revolve around your future career
- C. revolving around your future career
- D. to be revolving on your future career

Question 23.

- A. As important as that is B. As important than that is Question 24.

- A. from career paths and earning potential
- B. from career paths and earned potential
- C. about career paths and earned potential
- D. about career paths and earning potential

Question 25.

- A. neither AI chatbot engineers and Amazon drone delivery drivers did
- B. AI chatbot engineers and Amazon drone delivery drivers did neither
- C. neither did AI chatbot engineers and Amazon drone delivery drivers
- D. did AI chatbot engineers and Amazon drone delivery drivers neither

Question 26.

- A. therefore the world develops and changes
- B. as the world develops and changes
- C. despite the world develops and changes
- D. although the world develops and changes

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the following questions.

Across the world, migratory animals like wildebeest - which rely on movement to find food, water and calving grounds - are under threat. This is mainly because their migration routes are being cut off by settlements, farms, roads and other developments, and the areas where they roam are getting smaller. They also face the additional challenges of poaching and having less food to eat because of livestock overgrazing and agriculture. We found extreme declines in the numbers of migrating wildebeest and loss of most migration routes in Kenya and Tanzania.

The threats facing the various populations differ in each area. The leading causes of decline are poorly planned agricultural expansion, settlements, urban centres, roads and other infrastructure, poaching and competition with livestock for food, space and drinking water. Some threats are driven by increasing human and livestock numbers. The way land is used is changing and there's also more human-wildlife conflict as more animals come into contact with people.

So, there have been failures on a number of fronts. These include policies that don't regulate where people settle, wildlife conservation and management policies. A key government wildlife policy failure in Kenya is that it has focused primarily on protected areas. But these areas cover only 8% of the country's land surface and support only 35% of the wildlife. The other 65% occupy private lands, which all the four threatened wildebeest migrations cross.

A huge problem here is that there isn't incentive for private landowners to look after wildlife. They receive little to no benefit from wildlife. This is because Kenya banned the use of and trade in wildlife and wildlife products in 1977. This limits opportunities to game viewing. But tourists don't visit many areas and so other land uses, like agriculture and livestock production, are more appealing.
