All languages are in flux. In other words, they are constantly changing. This is especially true of English, which is a real global language. There are now three times more non-native speakers of English than natives. About one billion people speak it as a foreign language, while only 360 million speak it as a mother tongue. So why is English changing and is this a good thing?

One reason is globalisation. Today business meetings can be held with people from all over the world – for example, Brazil, Nigeria and Japan. Nearly always, the only common language spoken will be English. This has led to the creation of a new language variety called International English. It is a kind of English which speakers from all countries can use to talk to each other.

English plays a different role in different countries. In Singapore, Hong Kong and the Philippines, English is spoken as a second language. In the Philippines, Tagalog (the country's main language) and English merge to create a variety called Taglish. But some local languages don't merge with official languages in this way, and they are in danger because fewer people speak them.

How is Bill going to get to the football game?

[pause]

MAN: How are you going to get to the football game, Bill? By bus?

BOY: No, I can't. There are no buses this morning.

MAN: The weather's nice; you could walk.

BOY: Dad! If I walk, I'll be too tired to play!

MAN: All right then. Let's go in the car.

[pause]

Can you see the tick? Now you listen and tick the box.

[pause]

1 Where are Dad's keys?

MAN: Now, where have I put my keys? They're not in my pocket.

BOY: Have you looked in your bag?

MAN: Wait a minute. No. My bag's empty.

BOY: Look, Dad. Here they are. They're still in the door!

[pause]

2 Where is Dad going to go first?

MAN: I'd like to go to the bank first, then I can take you to the football club.

BOY: Dad, the game starts in half an hour. If we go into town, I'll be late.

MAN: OK. I'll take you there now and get some money later.

BOY: Thanks, Dad. Oh – can we stop at the shop? I'd like to buy some sweets.

MAN: No, Bill, we can't! There isn't enough time – remember?

[pause]

3 What happened to Tom last Saturday?

MAN: Is Tom going to play today?

MAN: Oh dear!

[pause]

4 Which is the team's new football shirt?

BOY: Dad, have you seen our team's new shirt?
