What is Sports Tourism?

Sports tourism is travelling from one region, country, state, etc. to engage or participate in a sports-related activity. Sports tourism combines the passion for sports with the desire to experience new experiences or destinations.

While sports tourism has not always been extremely popular, it is definitely on the rise. A recent report estimates the value of the global sports tourism market was $587.87 billion in 2022. The industry is expected to grow at a rate of 17.5% through 2030. The popularity of events like the Olympic Games, the NBA, and the FIFA World Cup have contributed to this growth. While these events have economic short-term benefits for an area, they can be a catalyst for longer-term tourism development opportunities.

In 2004, the World Tourism Organisation (WTO) and the International Olympic Committee (IOC) issued a joint statement that illustrates the strong dynamic between sports and tourism, "Tourism and sports are interrelated and complementary. Sport - as a professional, amateur or leisure activity - involves a considerable amount of travelling to play and compete in different destinations and countries. Major sporting events, such as the Olympic Games, football and rugby championships and auto racing have become powerful tourism attractions in themselves - making a very positive contribution to the tourism image of the host destination".

VIII. Read the following passage and mark letter A, B, C or D to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions that follow.

It is a common saying that we do not fully value a thing until we lose it. We often value the love and worth of a friend when he has been taken from us by death more than when he was with US in the flesh; it is only when we have left school or college that we understand the greatness of our opportunity of education, which has gone forever; and it is the sick and the ailing who realize the value of good health, when we are young and strong, we cannot imagine what it is to be weak and ailing. We are so used to vigorous health that we take it for granted. The organs of our body work so smoothly that we scarcely know we have lungs and liver, heart and stomach. But when any of these gets upset and gives us pain and sickness, we learn by bitter experience what an unspeakable blessing it is to be well.

Loss of health makes us miserable, and a burden to ourselves and our friends. It cripples our efforts so that we cannot accomplish many of the good and great things we might have done. It spoils our life. What must we do to keep our health?

We must be moderate in eating and drinking and wise in the choice of plain, wholesome simple food. Gluttony has killed thousands, and strong drink tens of thousands. We must, when young, get plenty of sleep, which is "nature's sweet restorer", and not try to burn the candle at both ends. We must live as much as possible in the open air and keep our rooms well ventilated. We must get sufficient and regular physical exercise, and keep our bodies clean. And we must avoid bad habits and secret sins as we avoid the devil, and keep our thoughts clean and our bodies pure. Our ideal must be the sound mind in the sound body.

VIII. Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions that follow.

In the recent survey, more than 80% of American high school students work at part-time jobs in the evenings, on weekends or in summer. These part-time jobs bring teenagers great advantages.

One of the benefits of the work is the students can learn the skills that will be useful for the rest of their lives. When they work, they have to manage both the job and schoolwork. To be able to do so, they must be very organized and able to keep a sensible schedule. They also learn to cope with the job stress apart from the stress of the schoolwork. Some of the most stressful jobs include teaching, nursing, and police work. These skills help prepare teenagers for their later careers. High school students who work are more likely to succeed as adults than people who enter the job market at a later age with no work experience. Teenagers want a lot of expensive things: clothes, mp3 players, trips with their friends, etc. Not all parents can afford them. And even if they can, the teens might not really appreciate that money because they did not earn it. When teenagers make money for themselves, they know its true and are less likely to spend it foolishly.

28.Which of the following is a good title for the passage?

A.Why teenagers should work

B. Part-time jobs cause stress

C.USA high school students work at part-time jobs in the evenings

D. Advantages and disadvantages of part-time jobs

Do you know what it means to be optimistic? Being optimistic means having a positive outlook on life. It means looking at the bright side of things, even when times are tough. Optimistic people believe that things will work out for the best, and they try to find solutions to problems instead of dwelling on the negatives.

Being optimistic can have many benefits. It helps us stay motivated and hopeful, even when faced with challenges. Optimistic people tend to be in a better mood, which can lead to better relationships with others. They are also more resilient and better equipped to handle setbacks.

Let's look at an example. Imagine you have a big test coming up, and you haven't had much time to study. An optimistic person would think, "Even though I didn't have much time to study, I'll do my best and see what happens. I can always learn from my mistakes and do better next time." This positive mindset helps them stay calm and focused during the test, increasing their chances of success.

Now, being optimistic doesn't mean ignoring reality or pretending that everything is perfect. It simply means choosing to focus on the positive aspects of a situation and believing in one's ability to overcome challenges.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions that follow.

One of the most unpleasant experiences I had at school was when I argued with my best friend, John. It was over something really silly – a misunderstanding about a group project. We were supposed to work together on a science project, but we disagreed on how to divide the tasks. John thought I wasn't doing my fair share of the work, and I thought he was being too bossy.

The argument started during lunch break. Our voices got louder, and soon, everyone around us was staring. I was so angry that I said some hurtful things that I didn't mean. John was equally upset and walked away, leaving me feeling wrong and alone.

For the next few days, we didn't speak to each other. I was unhappy because John and I had been friends since kindergarten. I missed our talks and the fun we used to have. Eventually, I realized that our friendship was more important than the project. I decided to apologize.

One afternoon, I found Johnsitting alone in the school library. I took a deep breath and walked over to him. I told him I was sorry for my behavior and that I missed our friendship. John looked at me for a moment and then smiled. He apologized too, and we both agreed to put the argument behind us.

From this experience, I learned the importance of communication and forgiveness in maintaining friendships. It taught me to handle disagreements more maturely in the future.

Digital technologies have remarkably changed teenagers' life and work both positively and negatively. According to UNICEF, 71% of 15-24-year-olds are online and one third of Internet users are under 18 years old.

Teenagers benefit from the advances in technology. They have various devices like computers, tablets, smartphones, and applications to improve the ways they learn, broaden their relationships, and spend their leisure time. They have more opportunities to learn, get access to information, and use different communication channels inexpensively.

However, they also face many risks. First, there is a concern about children's physical and mental health. Statistics show that teens spend less time doing physical activities, and many more teens suffer from obesity, bone and eye problems. Moreover, teens are also at risk of visiting websites which promote self-harm or suicide. In fact, cyber-bullying on the Internet has become more serious than bullying at school.

Schools and parents should guide children so that they can use devices wisely and not become victims of those devices and technologies.

It is known that the development of children in their early years lays the foundation for their future physical, cognitive and social skills. It is, therefore, vital to understand how children grow and what influences their growth. Research has found four key factors affecting early childhood development.

Many of children's characteristics such as body shape, eyes and hair colours, complexion, intelligence, and some diseases are passed down through genes. Although it is impossible to change the natural colours of their hair, eyes and skin, other elements can be improved through nurture and training.

Any factors in the surrounding environment in which children are brought up can affect their development and growth. The amount of sunshine and rainfall in the area, the level of pollution, the geographical conditions as well as the social network and relationships around a child can have a profound impact on their health, cognition and social skills.

A balanced and nutritious diet rich in protein, vitamins, carbohydrates and fat is essential for a healthy brain and body. Both malnutrition and overeating can cause serious health problems and bring about detrimental effects on children's growth in the long run.

The family plays a critical role in the way a child develops socially and psychologically. Parents' investment in time, attention and energy to provide diverse activities, meaningful play and deep conversations contributes to the most favourable outcomes for children. In contrast, children who suffer from neglect and abuse at home may have poor social skills and difficulties in bonding with others.

Cities are fascinating places filled with a unique energy. They are home to a diverse population, with people from all walks of life and countless cultures coming together. These concrete jungles, as they are sometimes called, are constantly evolving, with new buildings reaching for the sky and innovations changing the urban landscape.

One of the most striking features of a city is its towering skyscrapers. These steel and glass giants offer breathtaking views and house businesses, offices, and even residential apartments. Beneath these giants, a network of subways and buses weaves through the city, forming the lifeblood of its transportation system. Thousands of people rely on this network to get to work, school, and appointments, creating a constant flow of movement.

Cities are also cultural hubs, bursting with museums, art galleries, and theaters. These institutions offer opportunities to learn about history, appreciate art, and enjoy live performances. From traditional museums showcasing ancient artifacts to modern galleries featuring contemporary art, cities offer a diverse range of cultural experiences.

However, city life also presents challenges. Traffic congestion can be a major issue, causing delays and frustration for commuters. Additionally, the high cost of living in a city can be a burden for some residents. Nonetheless, the vibrant energy, diverse culture, and endless opportunities make cities a unique and captivating environment for many people.

VIII. Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions that follow.

One of the most important aspects of city life is public transportation. Efficient public transport systems can greatly enhance the quality of life for city dwellers by reducing traffic congestion and pollution. Many large cities have developed extensive networks of buses, trains, and subways to help people get around quickly and affordably.

In cities like Tokyo and New York, public transportation is an essential part of daily life. The Tokyo subway system is known for its punctuality and cleanliness, transporting millions of passengers every day. Similarly, New York's subway system, though older and less reliable, is crucial for the mobility of its residents. Public transportation not only benefits individuals but also has a positive impact on the environment. By reducing the number of private vehicles on the road, public transport systems help to lower emissions and decrease the city's carbon footprint. Additionally, using public transportation can be more economical for residents, saving money on fuel and parking fees.

However, public transportation systems also face challenges. In many cities, aging infrastructure and lack of funding can lead to delays and overcrowding. Safety and cleanliness are other concerns that need to be addressed to make public transport more appealing to users.

Despite these issues, the advantages of public transportation in city life are clear. Investments in modernizing and expanding public transport can lead to significant improvements in urban living conditions. Encouraging the use of public transportation is essential for the sustainable development of cities.

VIII. Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions that follow.

Living in a friendly neighbourhood can make all the difference in the world. It's more than just having a roof over your head; it's about feeling a sense of belonging and connection to the community around you. I am fortunate to live in just such a neighbourhood, and I wouldn't trade it for anything.

One of the things that makes my neighbourhood so special is the people who live here. Everyone is so friendly and welcoming, and there's a real sense of community spirit. Whether it's chatting with a neighbour over the garden fence, or helping someone carry their groceries home, there's always a willingness to lend a hand.

There are also plenty of amenities in the area that make living here so convenient. There are several parks nearby, which are perfect for taking a leisurely stroll or having a picnic. The local library is also a great resource, with a wide selection of books and free community events. And if I ever need anything, there are plenty of shops and restaurants within walking distance.

In short, living in this friendly neighbourhood is a truly special experience. The people, the amenities, and the sense of community all come together to create a sense of belonging and connection that is hard to find elsewhere. I feel incredibly lucky to call it my home.

Located in the heart of the city, at 2 Công Xã Paris Street, District 1, the Central Post Office was built between 1886 and 1891, and it is still a working post office today. This magnificent building is a perfect example of Gothic and Renaissance styles.

Visitors can admire its grand interior with complex metalwork, and a vast collection of antique telephones and stamps. It's also a great place to purchase unique souvenirs, including postcards and stamps.

For those who want to learn more about the history and significance of Hồ Chí Minh City landmarks, the visitor centre located near the entrance of the Central Post Office is well worth a visit. Here, you can find information about the buildings' construction, as well as maps and brochures that will help you explore the area.

The Notre Dame Cathedral

Just a short walk across the Central Post Office, you'll find the Notre Dame Cathedral, another must-see landmark. It was built in the late 19th century, and is considered one of the most beautiful examples of neo-Romanesque architecture in Southeast Asia.

The cathedral has the twin bell towers that reach a height of about 58 metres. Looking up, visitors can marvel at the stunning stained-glass windows and beautiful carvings. The cathedral can accommodate up to 1,200 worshippers. It's also a popular spot for photographers, as the stunning facade of the cathedral makes for a perfect backdrop.

VIII. Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions that follow.

Education is another area of social life in which information technology is changing the way we communicate. Today's college students may not simply sit in a lecture or a library to learn about their field. Through their computers and the wonders of virtual reality, they can participate in lifelike simulated experiences and consider the following scenario of the future of education made possible through developments in information technology.

For children over the age of 10, daily attendance at schools is not compulsory. Yet, some of the older children attend school only once or twice weekly to get tutorial support or instruction from a teacher. For the most part, pupils are encouraged to work online from home. Students must complete a minimum number of study hours per year. In order to ensure that each student is learning adequately, computer software will automatically monitor the number of hours a week each student studies online as well as students' learning materials and assessment activities. The software can then identify the best learning activities and condition for each individual student and generate similar activities. It can also identify areas of weak achievement and produce special programs adjusted to the students' needs.

Read the following passage and mark letter A, B, C or D to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions

Homestay is a type of tourism where travellers stay with local families in their homes.

It offers both benefits and drawbacks.

One benefit of homestay is the opportunity to experience local culture firsthand. Travellers can learn about traditional customs, taste authentic homemade food, and engage in daily activities with the host family. It provides a deeper understanding of the local way of life.

Another advantage is the chance to establish connections and make new friends. Staying with a host family allows for personal interactions and cultural exchange, fostering cross-cultural understanding and friendship.

However, there are also some drawbacks to consider. One downside is the potential lack of privacy. Sharing living spaces with the host family means less personal space and limited privacy compared to staying in a hotel.

Communication may also be a challenge if there are language barriers. It can be difficult to fully communicate and express needs and preferences without a common language.

Additionally, homestays may have different levels of comfort and amenities compared to hotels. Facilities may be basic, and travellers need to adapt to the host family's lifestyle and routines.

In conclusion, homestay tourism offers unique cultural experiences and the chance to connect with locals. While there may be challenges such as privacy and communication, it can be a rewarding way to immerse oneself in the local community and create lasting memories.

Homestay is a type of tourism where travellers stay with local families in their homes. It offers both benefits and drawbacks.

One benefit of homestay is the opportunity to experience local culture firsthand. Travellers can learn about traditional customs, taste authentic homemade food, and engage in daily activities with the host family. It provides a deeper understanding of the local way of life.

Another advantage is the chance to establish connections and make new friends. Staying with a host family allows for personal interactions and cultural exchange, fostering cross-cultural understanding and friendship.

However, there are also some drawbacks to consider. One downside is the potential lack of privacy. Sharing living spaces with the host family means less personal space and limited privacy compared to staying in a hotel.

Communication may also be a challenge if there are language barriers. It can be difficult to fully communicate and express needs and preferences without a common language.

Additionally, homestays may have different levels of comfort and amenities compared to hotels. Facilities may be basic, and travellers need to adapt to the host family's lifestyle and routines.

In conclusion, homestay tourism offers unique cultural experiences and the chance to connect with locals. While there may be challenges such as privacy and communication, it can be a rewarding way to immerse oneself in the local community and create lasting memories.

Local Community

A local community is a group of people living in the same area, who share common values, interests, and goals. It can consist of people living in a neighborhood, a town, or even a village. Local communities are important because they provide social support and a sense of belonging. People in these communities often help each other in times of need, whether it's offering assistance with daily tasks or providing emotional support during difficult times.

Local communities also play a key role in organizing events such as festivals, clean-up projects, and educational programs. These activities help strengthen the ties between members and promote cooperation. Additionally, local communities can influence local politics by ensuring that the needs of residents are addressed. When people feel connected to their community, they are more likely to contribute to its growth and improvement.

Being part of a local community provides individuals with a sense of identity and pride. It fosters cooperation, helping people to work together for the common good. Ultimately, a strong local community can lead to better living conditions, increased happiness, and a sense of purpose for its members.
