American Idol is a singing competition and television show of the United States. The first season of American Idol premiered in June 11,2002 and is one of the most popular TV shows in the United States. American Idol was bought the rights from the British Pop Idol program founded by producer Simon Fuller.

The American Idol contest was founded with the aim of finding the most promising singers in the US through a series of auditions held throughout the country. After that, the finalists will be decided by the vote of the audience by phone. The program's feature is that after the contestant's performance, the judges will make their comments to help the audience choose suitable contestants. Initially, three judges of American Idol were Randy Jackson, a music producer, Paula Abdul, a pop singer and dancer and Simon Cowell, a director of record. By the 8th season, Kara DioGuardi, a music producer, was invited to be the fourth judge of the show. Currently, from the 13th season, the program has three judges, Harry Connick, Jr, Jennifer Lopez and Keith Urban. The host of the competition is Ryan Seacrest.

American Idol is shown on a variety of TV channels such as FOX channel of the US, TVNZ of New Zealand, CTV of Canada, FOX8 of Australia, ITV2 of the UK. Viewers from Vietnamese and some Asian countries can also watch American Idol on star World channel.
